Distributed Sound Systems

Conference rooms, classrooms, restaurants, office buildings, and other commercial facilities use "Distributed Sound Systems" as an efficient means to distribute sound. These systems are commonly referred to as constant voltage (CV) systems or 70-volt transformer systems. What differentiates a "70-volt" from a standard PA system is that transformers are built into the speakers, and special amplifiers are used to power the speakers properly.

Source Component

Mixer/Amplifier

70V Speaker Wire

Speakers

Optional

Wall-mounted Volume Control

Why use a "70-volt" system?
• Very easy to design
• Economical
• Large numbers of speakers to be chained together in parallel
• Speakers can easily be added and removed
• No need to calculate impedance- just total power
• Higher voltage allows use of smaller gauge wire

Distributed Sound Systems are made up of the following Components:
1. Source Components - CD players, Tape decks, Tuners, MP3 players, etc.
2. Mixer & Amplifier - These provide input selection, signal control, and the power to drive speakers
3. Speakers – Two types of speakers are commonly used for fixed installations: Surface-Mount (external) & Ceiling-Mount (internal)
4. Speaker Wire - Most installations use 18 gauge, two-conductor, stranded, jacketed wire. (There is no need for a shield)
5. Wall-Mounted Volume Controls (Optional) – Allows users to remotely control volume
